

Strider's Report – ██████ Files: Fire Spider Excavation

Party: Ruby (me), Maeve, Lyssara, [REDACTED]

Objective: Eliminate the giant fire spider located beneath the Dripping Weald.

Heading North

We set to out to the north of the Dripping Weald to deal with the giant fire spider that had been discovered at the bottom of a pit.

The party consisted of myself, Maeve, Lyssara and [REDACTED].

█████ immediately let the women in our party do all the work. [Ironically █████ told the women in our party to start trimming the bush.]

This section has been reviewed, and claims have been made that this is “taken out of context” I disagree I am simply stating facts.

Spider Ambush

As we approached the crater, we were attacked by a large group of spiders.

These were not just ordinary spiders either. Among them were humanoid spiders, making the encounter much more dangerous.

The battle was chaotic, and ██████ unfortunately became the main target of many spider attacks. Especially the webs. A lot of webs. ████████████████████

Where from and what type of webbing I am not permitted to speak of.

This section has been edited after [REDACTED] requested that I stop asking questions about spider anatomy.

Despite the unfortunate number of web-related incidents, we defeated the spiders and continued.

The Crater

The small pit where the fire spider had originally been discovered had changed. It was no longer a small pit. It had become a massive crater stretching far below the surface.

We needed a safe way down. During the planning, █████ explained that his immovable rods could be used to create a climbing system.

A surprisingly useful idea. However...

[According to ██████, Ruby's dog is allowed to climb him, but women are not.]

I would like future readers to decide for themselves what this means.

The Descent

█████ had the idea of using his rod to lower himself into the wet hole... From past days of rain of course. This worked surprisingly well. Proceeding this, three women proceeded to top █████.

An extra note has been requested clarifying it were magical rods knowns as Immovable rods used to lower himself and the party down (riding on his shoulders) into the crater.

I believe my original writing was sufficient but let's move on.

The Magical Gate

At the bottom of the crater, we discovered a large portcullis. It was locked with magic and protected by necrotic energy. Touching it without the correct key caused damage and blindness. A very effective security system. A little excessive though, my eyes did not appreciate it.

The door basically required a password, a key, and probably a safe word. The door did not respond when asked for it's safe word.

The Fire Spider and The Hooded Woman

Protecting the gate, we encountered the giant fire spider and a mysterious hooded woman. [REDACTED] immediately moved to restrain the woman. He shoved her to the ground and stood over her. Clearly attempting to restore his reputation after the previous events. Primarily to reclaiming his dominant aura.

██████ has requested this sentence be removed. Ruby has declined.

The woman whispered something to [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] response was: "I didn't hear a no."

I would like to officially remind everyone reading this report that this is not how consent works. [REDACTED] has requested another edit. The request has been denied.

The Spider Fight

The fight continued, and the fire spider proved to be a dangerous opponent. Unfortunately for [REDACTED], the spider managed to cover his entire body in webs.

[REDACTED]
 [REDACTED]
 [REDACTED]
 [REDACTED] After [REDACTED] came to have a careful word with me I agree this is all the commentary this event requires. This edit was made voluntarily.

Afterwards, [REDACTED] decided to use himself as bait. He dropped down and acted vulnerable, attempting to convince the spider to attack him. A risky but effective strategy. Unfortunately for him... I had the perfect opportunity.

I took a picture. [REDACTED], dramatically groveling on the ground while the battle continued behind him. A historic moment a treasure to be kept forever something to go in the history books as this rare event simply had to be set in stone for ages to co-

This section has been heavily redacted any details pictures or drawings of this event are all fake and fabricated as the original has been destroyed and does no longer exist. In fact, I am told that this was all but a figment of my imagination. Again this edit was made voluntarily and not under duress.

The Puzzle Beyond

After defeating the fire spider, we opened the gate and discovered another strange challenge. Clearly a Mister Beast puzzle. And somehow... The Neverqueen appeared in my thoughts again. What an odd name for a person is he half beast does he own many beasts? Suspicious.

Inside was a hallway with floating platforms leading forward.

At the end were two statues.

A plaque explained:

- The left statue is benevolent.
- The right statue is malevolent.

Each platform contained a pressure plate that activated the next step. The puzzle also involved mirrors. Sometimes one statue held a mirror, meaning the positions of good and bad would swap. The malevolent statue attempts to deceive. The benevolent statue tells the truth.

There was also mention of a middle statue, but unfortunately the remaining notes became completely unintelligible.

Notes for Future Striders

- Fire spiders are dangerous.
- Humanoid spiders are also dangerous.
- Large holes should be approached carefully.
- [REDACTED] immovable rods are extremely useful.
- Do not give Ruby a writing assignment involving [REDACTED].

- If Ruby receives a writing assignment involving [REDACTED], expect redactions.
- The Neverqueen remains suspicious.